ACADEMY
BELL

Society everywhere is in conspiracy against every one of its members . . . who so would be a man must be a non-conformist. He who would gather immortal palms must not be hindered by the name of goodness but must explore if it be goodness, nothing is at last sacred but the integrity of your own mind.

DO NOT ABUSE OPPORTUNITY

Since almost every member of the graduating class this year will enter college in September, my message is directed principally to that group. At the risk of being called repetitious and old-fogyish, I again urge those entering college to bear in mind at least some of the advice about college that has been given you by those who have already been there and who may have some background to justify the advice they have given. Here at Monson you have learned, I trust, good study habits. It is true that some of you may have learned these habits in spite of your desire not to do so. At least you have been exposed to them. In college you will have no faculty member visiting your room periodically to check on whether you are utilizing your time advantageously. You will be "on your own" completely. You will probably rejoice at the realization of this new freedom and will be tempted to use the freedom to the limit in doing many things not permitted in preparatory school. This abuse of free time, unfortunately, causes the downfall of many a college freshman. The freshman year in college is in many respects the most difficult year, and it is particularly important that you get off to a good start. You yourselves are not the only ones to whom you owe the greatest possible effort to succeed. You owe your parents a great deal for their sacrifices in sending you to college; you owe a great deal to the college admission officials for having selected you for admission over some other fellow, and you must justify their confidence in you to make the grade; and you owe much to the school from which you are entering college.

Do your part in making yourselves valuable members of the college community. Go out for extra-curricular activities, but don't indulge in them to such an extent that you miss out on the real purpose of your attending college.

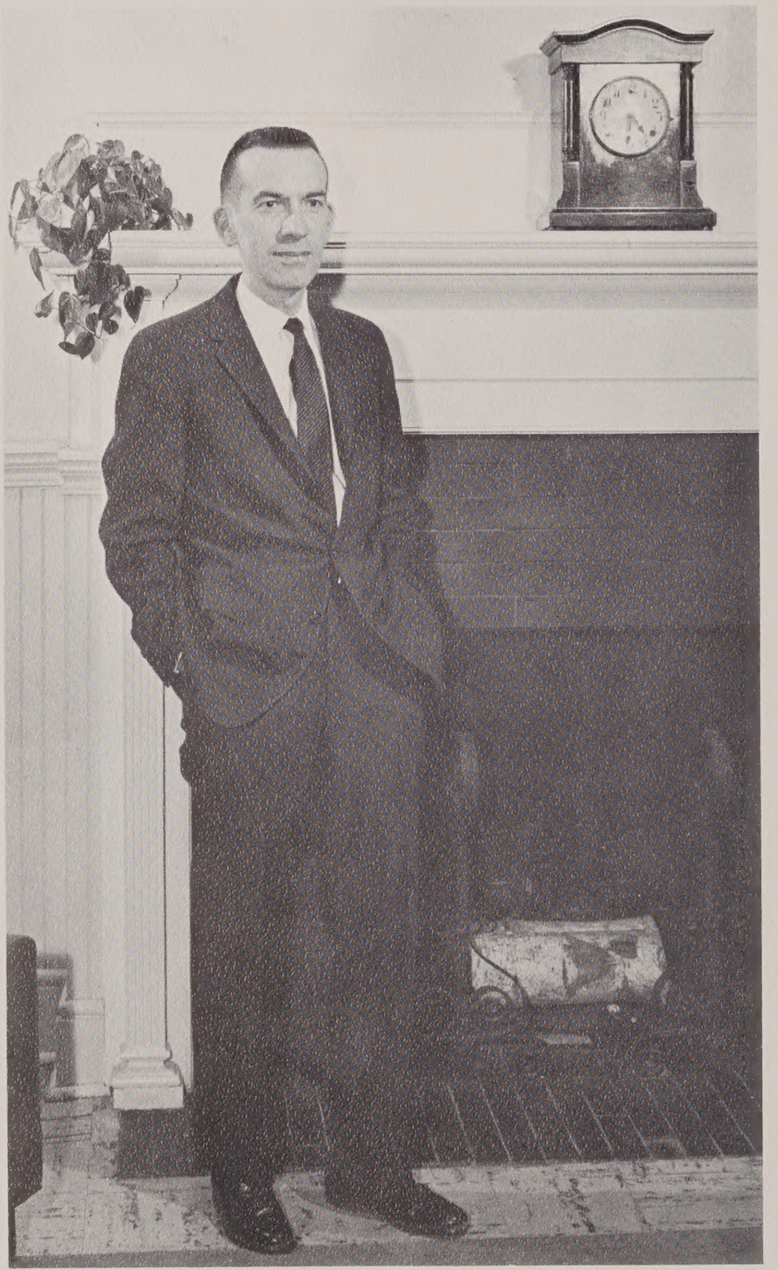
Don't be afraid to be gentlemen and to act as gentlemen. Don't be afraid to stand apart from the crowd if you know that you are right and the crowd is wrong. You don't necessarily have to be eccentric to do what you know is best. To follow the leadership of those whom you know to be wrong and whom you do not respect is only an indication of spinelessness on your part.

America needs educated men now as never before. You are being given an opportunity to enter college and later to take tests to determine whether or not you are worth educating. I believe you are. I sincerely hope you will justify the confidence which this school has placed in you.

Sincerely,

George E. Rogers

Headmaster



This edition of the Academy Bell is warmly dedicated by the Senior Class to John A. Pitts who has kindly given us the benefit of his wisdom, interested himself in our work and problems and favored us with valuable suggestions drawn from his large experience in the classroom and from his intimate acquaintance with needs of the learner. To him this volume is now respectfully and gratefully committed.

PREST POUR MON PAIS

As we the students of Monson Academy approach Alumni Hall we invariably notice the Academy Bell — the symbol of our school. Because of the Bell's symbolism and long history, we have chosen it as the title for our yearbook.

The familiar landmark dates back to the 1880's. At that time it was installed in the tower of the former school building, which was located on the site of Harper Gymnasium. When the building burned in 1953, the Bell in its brick tower was one of the few items which was salvaged. It was then erected on a pedestal near the entrance of the new school building, Alumni Hall. From this present position the Bell beckons the students to classes, and is rung to announce a sports victory.

The Yearbook Staff hopes that in future years the graduates of the Class of 1964 will be drawn once more by the Academy Bell to partake of the life of a student at Monson Academy.

PREST POUR MON PAIS

TRIBUTE TO THE SENIORS

The impact of the Class of 1964 upon Monson Academy will long be felt. These sixty-one young men established a record of excellence in scholarship, athletics, and leadership. It is common knowledge in our halls of learning that these students have comprised one of the most egregious classes in many years. The Academy Bell, on behalf of the student body and the faculty, wishes the Class of 1964 continued happiness and success. Ave atque vale!

"I shall pass this way but once;
any good, therefore, that I can do or any kindness that I can show to any human being, let me do it now.
Let me not defer nor neglect it, for
I shall not pass this way again."

The above quotation depicts the true character of Ronald Lord. It was carried in his wallet.

HISTORY OF

Monson Academy

Unlike most independent schools, Monson Academy does not owe its origin to a single founder. From the first it has been a cooperative effort. If we must point to a single great influence behind the school, we might go back to our first president of the board of trustees.

It was the Reverend John Willard, D.D., of Stafford, Connecticut, who joined with the local innkeeper, Joel Norcross, and the local parson, Jesse Ives, in arousing public interest to the point of getting a state charter for the founding of Monson Academy. Mention should be made also of the Reverend Alfred Ely, one of the first Trustees and an active member from 1806 to 1866.

Dr. Willard, who graduated from Harvard in 1751, was the brother of the more famous president of Harvard (1781-1804) and was able to interest many of the leading scholars of the day in his Monson Project. Under an act of 1797, the Massachusetts legislature had undertaken to endow with lands, in the province of Maine, any preparatory school build by the industry of the people, if that particular area needed such educational facilities. For the location of such a school in this part of Western Massachusetts Monson and Brimfield competed and after some debate, Monson was chosen.

The Act of Incorporation of Monson Academy was passed by the Massachusetts House of Representatives on June 21, 1804, and half the township of Monson, Maine, was granted as an endowment. A fund of over four thousand dollars was collected among local citizens, and the first Academy building was opened in 1806.

Though the school was and still is closely associated with the local Congregational Church, there has been no official religious affiliation with any group. All creeds and races are welcome. This fact, no doubt, had a great deal to do with the school's rapid rise to fame. The founding fathers had hoped for a school which would attract students from all over the state, in addition to functioning as a secondary school for the Monson area. In a very few years it had a national reputation; after its first quarter-century, students were coming from all over the world.

There is no space to go into the many details of Monson's history. We can, however, note a few landmarks. The first Headmaster, Simeon Colton, who left after his first year, in 1807, returned in 1821 and stayed nine years.

This was the period of Monson's beginning as a great school. During the decade 1820-1831 the school graduated such famous men as the Sophocles of Harvard, America's greatest classical scholar, who came to Monson from Smyrna in Asia Minor; Dr. Henry L. Barnard, the first United States Commissioner of Education, regarded as second only to Horace Mann in the development of the American public school; Professor W. A. Larned, late professor at Yale; and the Reverend Richard S. Storrs, D.D., of Brooklyn, New York, commonly and affectionately referred to in those days as "Prince of Preachers." A glance at the catalogues of the eighteen twenties will show students from England, Greece, Turkey, and many parts of North America. Men went out from the Academy to open up the West and carried the Gospel to the South Seas. The Reverend Cushing Eels and the Reverend Charles B. Summer were instrumental in founding, respectively, Whitman College in Washington and Pomona College in California.

The golden age of the school was the half-century between 1835 and 1855. This was, indeed, the period of greatest flowering of the New England Academy, and many fine old schools that made history are no longer in existence. Only a few of the private schools survived the rival growth of public schools. In the middle of the last century, however, Monson built up prestige that was to carry it through the years right up to the present day, though no longer an Academy for young ladies and gentlemen, but in its new role as a preparatory school for boys.

In 1835, Charles Hammond, of Union, Connecticut, entered Monson as a student. He was zealous and idealistic, one of his idols being Dr. Arnold, of Rugby. In due course he was graduated and went to Yale, but in 1839, he was back in Monson as principal. He served as principal from 1839 to 1852, and again from 1863 to 1878 — a total of twenty-four years. This great man educated more distinguished personages than many a college has turned out. He towered above his fellows in the educational field. All kinds of reforms were introduced in his day, and the old dictum of "spare the rod and spoil the child" was abandoned. Like Thomas Arnold, he preferred to trust his students' honor, and he once said he would do his best to "make Monson a smaller Rugby". During his administration the enrollment of the school was frequently above three hundred, drawn from all parts of the world.

Over a hundred years ago, in 1847, the first Chinese students ever to come to the United States enrolled at Monson Academy.

Nearly a generation later the first Japanese students came, and until the end of the century there was always a fair sprinkling of Orientals amongst the student body.

The physical plant of the school, in the meantime, increased with the student body. In 1819 the first dormitory was built for the boarding students near the present site of Cushman Hall. In 1824 the first laboratory was erected and expensively equipped with appartus "specially imported from England." The site of this old laboratory, one of the first in the country, is now occupied by the Holmes Gymnasium. In 1845, at a cost of four thousand dollars, Dr. Hammond had the entire school renovated and modernized and spent further thousands to re-equip the English department. As in the case of the original building, this large sum was raised by the twonsfolk.

During this golden age of the academy, many great men were graduated from Monson. The class of 1850 was particularly brilliant. In that year Jacob Strong left to enter Williams College, and eventually he became associate justice of the United States Supreme Court. The brilliant young Chinese, Wong Afun, left Monson to enter Edinburgh University and to become eventually one of country's greatest doctors. Another young Chinese, Yung Wing, was graduated, only to return to America some years later as Commissioner of the Chinese Educational Commission and as Chinese Minister to the United States. Only two years later, in 1852, Henry Billings Brown, another future United States Supreme Court Justice, was graduated. Judge Reuben Chapman served as a Trustee from 1828 to 1873 and later became Chief Justice of the Massachusetts Supreme Court. The Reverend James Tufts, who attended the Academy in his early teens, later became Vice-President, and for one year Acting President, of the University of Chicago.

The Civil War caused a temporary closing of the Academy in 1862, but it reopened in the following year after two additional wings had been added to the old building.

This brief survey would not be complete without a few words about the missionary endeavors of Monson graduates. The Reverend James L. Merrick, one of the first American missionaries to Persia, was graduated in 1826, and he later established an endowment fund, the Persian Fund. Gilbert Rockwood, class of 1840, died while preaching the Gospel to the Zulus in South Africa. It was the work of such men that helped to attract students to Monson from so many parts of the world.

The rise of free secondary education in the latter part of the last century did a great deal to decrease the need for a private school. Some establishments including Monson Academy, served the purpose of the local high school in many rural communities. Until regular high schools were built, these private schools accepted local students, whose tuition was paid by the town. This situation somewhat altered the character of the older academies, but in many cases it was the means of survival.

A disastrous fire in 1886 completely destroyed the old Academy Hall, but later in the same year a more substantial granite-and-brick building was erected. The Holmes Gymnasium was built in 1900 by Miss Esther R. Holmes in memory of her father, Cyrus W. Holmes, Jr., and Cushman Hall, in 1904, by Thaddeus L. Cushman in memory of his nephew, Frank Chapin Cushman. An older dormitory, Hammond Hall, was at the same time torn down to make room for a headmaster's residence, Hammond Place. Cushman Memorial Field was given in 1911 by Edward C. Cushman as a memorial to Grace Sedgwick Cushman and Frank Chapin Cushman.

After the First World War the town of Monson finally decided to build a seperate high school. This action meant that virtually all of the local Academy students would transfer to the new institution. Consequently, the school was again temporarily closed in 1923, while arrangements were made to revert to the old status of a century before. During the next two years the Trustees granted the use of the Academy buildings to the town for use as a high school. In 1926 Monson Academy was reopened as a purely college preparatory school for boys. The new headmaster, Mr. Bertram A. Strohmeier, announced in the catalogue that the school would be "developed on an American adaptation of the English house plan." By this arranegment the boys live in small groups in separate houses under the immediate care of one or more masters. In keeping with this plan an additional dormitory Morris House, was deeded to the Academy by Miss Esther R. Holmes in 1927, and yet another house, The Homestead, in 1937, through the generosity of Miss Hattie F. Cushman.

No historical sketch of Monson Academy would be quite complete without a tribute to Thaddeus L. Cushman, who was a member of the Board of Trustees for thirty-eight years, Treasurer for thirty-six years, and Secretary-Treasurer of the Monson Alumni Association for forty years. His unselfishness and benevolence afforded him great pleasure and satisfaction, besides providing necessities and comforts to others less fortunate than he.

Mr. Strohmeier was succeeded in 1935 by Dr. George E. Rogers, under whose administration the size of the student body was increased. Plans are now under consideration for the centralization of the school plant in the not-too-distant future.

In 1938, the Holmes Gymnasium was enlarged. In the same year the disastrous hurricane struck Monson with full force. The beautiful elms that lined Main Street and surrounded the Academy were uprooted by the force of the gale.

In the immediate post-war years the Academy, sensing its obligation, admitted many returning veterans in order that they might continue their interrupted education.

In 1947 the Academy acquired two additional buildings. Through the generosity of Mrs. Rufus P. Cushman, Chapin House was added to the Academy and serves as a dormitory. In addition, the home of Miss Adelaide Wingate, now called Holmbrook, was acquired. It is now serving as a dormitory and dining hall. In 1948, the Academy constructed the new Cushman Memorial Field, which replaced the old field destroyed in the 1938 hurricane. An additional playing area was constructed on a lower level in 1947.

On February 23, 1953, a disastrous fire swept the Academy Hall. Despite this tragedy the Academy continued to function for the remainder of the year. Both faculty and students demonstrated hardihood in carrying on in view of extremely difficult conditions. Plans were immediately made to replace Academy Hall. It was decided that the new location would be at the top of the hill on High Street, with the view in mind of centralizing the location of the campus. The new, modern Academy, called Alumni Hall, was completed and ready for occupancy by September, 1954. Through the ceaseless efforts of Alumni, staff, and friends of the Academy, the new building became a reality.

The new Alumni Hall was officially dedicated on the occasion of the school's sesquicentennial celebration, on October 9, 1954. At this time leaders in the educational field gathered at Monson to celebrate the dual occasion and to take cognizance of the role of the private school in America. Upon the occasion, the principal speaker was Dr. Charles W. Cole, President of Amherst College.

Sharing the speaking honors with Dr. Cole was the Honorable Thomas C. Clark, Associate Justice, United States Supreme Court.

In 1956 the Board of Trustees purchased the large colonial house and property just north of Alumni Hall for use as the Headmaster's residence. For many years it was the home of the late Robert H. Cushman and the late William H. Hodgman, both of whom had been long-time members of the Board of Trustees. Hammond Place, which had served as the Headmaster's residence since 1904, was converted into a dormitory for two masters and fourteen boys. In 1958 the Board of Trustees purchased a large duplex house on Flynt Avenue for use as a dormitory for two masters and nineteen boys. It is known as Flynt House.

Four new tennis courts, featuring the best quality surfacing, were constructed behind Holmbrook in the spring of 1962. In the fall of that year, the Harper Gymnasium was completed. On the main floor is a competitive basketball court, which is divided into two cross courts for practice use, and has a seating capacity for over four hundred people. In the basement there are rooms for wrestling practice and athletic equipment, besides an outstanding rifle range. At present the shower and locker facilities in Holmes Gymnasium are being used. The former rifle range in Cushman Hall was converted to study, recreational, and supply rooms. This fine supplement to the school was made possible largely through the generosity of Mr. and Mrs. Earl T. Harper of Worcester, Massachusetts.

When school opened in the autumn of 1963, the students found an addition to the rear of Alumni Hall ready for use. A gift of Mr. and Mrs. Harper, the new wing consists of four comfortable classrooms, one of which is an excellent foreign language laboratory, and a faculty lounge, the former one having been converted into an extra office. The dedication of the addition took place on Alumni Homecoming Day, October 5, 1963. In the summer of that year, the two tennis courts next to Morris House were resurfaced.

Adversity and misfortune have been challenged and overcome. A new Academy Hall has emerged from ashes. Whatever distinction Monson Academy may achieve in the future will be due in large degree to the complete selfless efforts of the Headmaster, Dr. George E. Rogers.
